

The Naming of a Motor-Car

By Edgar Turner and Reginald Hodder.

(Copyright, 1924, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"What to call her? That's the question," said Branson, the director, of the Zoological gardens, as he walked round his new 16 horsepower motor-car at the gate, admiring her build and indicating her strong points here and there.

"Call her Rattlesnake, or Eagle, or Bison," I suggested. "Regard her as another strange creature added to your collection."

"None of those names exactly describes 16 horsepower," he objected. "Indeed, I walked through the gardens this morning, from the ostriches to the tortoises, without finding just the thing wanted."

Dr. Branson's house, where I was spending a short holiday, was on the outskirts of the gardens, facing the encircling road, and from behind the heavy banks of foliage at the back we could hear the lowing of the cattle, the bleating of the sheep, the croaking of the frogs, and the hooting of the owls. With the sound of the primordial forest in our ears, the motor throbbing with pent energy seemed strangely unreal.

"No, I'm hanged if I know what to call her," said Branson after a brief, reflective silence. "Here, let's take a spin round the circle at high speed. There's no one about, and 50 miles an hour might inspire us with a name."

"Sorry. Afraid I can't come," I replied. "I want to catch the late mail, and have only a quarter of an hour to do it in."

"All right," he said, getting in "see you later." And the car started round the circle in search of a name.

I ran up to the house and in a few minutes finished my letter. Then, wheeling out my bicycle, I mounted and set off for the post office. As I passed along the outer wall of the gardens, I heard a commotion among the ducks, accompanied by loud shouts. What was the matter? Possibly, I thought, some keepers chasing a predatory dog that had no right in the zoo. And as the shouting soon ceased, I assumed that they had successfully scared the marauder away from the duck ponds.

As I drew near a large acacia shadowing the path outside the wall, I concluded that my guess was correct, for I saw a huge dog leap over on to the roadside and stand in the shadow watching my approach. He appeared to be one of those massive Great Dane brutes, but I could not see him very distinctly.

When I drew level with the acacia, I flicked my fingers and said gaily: "Hello, boy! After the ducks, eh?"

For a moment I thought he liked my pleasant greeting. But only for a moment. Then my heart stood still and my hair rose on my head; for a mighty roar came from the animal's throat, and with a tremendous bound he leaped himself in the air at me.

Instinctively I made a sudden spring to escape the spring, and glancing over my shoulder, saw the huge beast descending. I groaned as I heard the heavy fall of his feet a little way behind my back wheel. That momentary glance showed me that it was a savage lion, and not a dog, that was at my heels.

While he pulled himself together after his spring, I put on speed and galloped a few yards. But he followed swiftly. And presently there was another roar, and I knew he was in the air a second time. Thinking that in a second his sharp claws would be in my shoulders, I nearly rolled off the bicycle with terror. Again, however, he fell short, and again I sprang for dear life.

He followed at a gallop and then sprang once more. The moments while he was in the air seemed hours, and when his four paws thudded on the road again, I felt to my horror that he had alighted a little nearer to me than before. I bent over the handlebars and strove to increase my speed, but my legs were weak and trembling, and I could not. I heard his angry growls and quick breath as he galloped again, and I expected presently to hear his roar before his next spring. And at that roar I felt I should collapse. It is an awful sound when it is hard on your heels.

Again he sprang—this time with a short snarl. Coll thrills shot down my back as I spurred forward. The snap of his jaws sounded "not two yards off my back wheel, and a growl of baffled rage spoke of his disappointment.

But I was now beginning to collect my wits, and my legs were getting firm again. I resolved that at the next spring I would swerve from the center of the road to the right-hand side and so possibly evade him. It came. I felt him rushing through the air behind me, and swerved sharply. No sooner had I done so than he alighted almost abreast of me on the track I had just left. His bark and snarl were terrible to hear.

Keeping on the extreme right-hand side of the road, I increased my pace, the lion following at a gallop less than half a dozen yards behind. Suddenly I saw the lights of a motor-car rounding the curve ahead of me. This, I thought, would frighten him; but no; he was mad and determined to have me. The car was approaching very rapidly. Like lightning, I made up my mind to cut across his path, hoping in this way to scare or baffle my pursuer. Just as I swerved to do this, there came another roar from behind. Apparently the lion had guessed my plan, and this time I felt that his spring was right on my track. I found, too, that I had misjudged the pace of the car, which was now tearing down on us at racing speed. I swerved further and headed direct for the opposite side of the road to avoid being run down. The thing occupied not three seconds. The roar and the spring of the lion, the "foot" of the motor a dozen yards away, and my swerving to escape, were almost simultaneous.

I felt the wind of the rushing car as it grazed my hind wheel. There was a shout, a crashing thud, and a bolt on the part of the car; while I, unable to stop my career, dashed full tilt into the thick hedge at the roadside.

The juddering foliage of the micro carpa, of which the hedge was composed, saved me from broken bones; but it was some time before I could pull myself together. When at last I did so and crawled out, I saw Branson and two of the zoological garden keepers, both breathless as if they had been running, gathered round an object in the middle of the road. It was the lion, dead.

"How did it happen?" I asked, feeling very much saved.

"Why," said Branson, "all I know is that at the moment you cut across my track, I saw the brute, with his eyes gleaming in the light, descending from his spring. He touched ground within a few inches of your wheel, and at that very moment we caught him fair on the head. It nearly upset us. Heavens! old man, it was a narrow escape all round."

"It was the narrowest escape I ever had," I exclaimed; and I narrated the pursuit briefly.

"The pity of it is," he said, dejectedly, "it's the finest lion in the garden."

"Yes, I've Killed Him with My Motor Car."

deas, and I've killed him with my motor car. His skull is completely smashed."

He was indeed a magnificent beast. As he lay there dead on the road in the moonlight, I could not help admiring him, though he had almost been the death of me.

"Yes, I've killed him with my motor car," repeated Branson. "But," he added, turning to the keepers, "if it hadn't been for your carelessness, he would have been alive in his cage now. How the demon did his get loose!"

One of the keepers started to explain in a lame fashion.

"Yes, yes," broke in Branson, cutting him short. "You shall give me the rest of the details later. Now see about taking the animal away. And remember that this is purely a departmental matter. No chattering to newspaper people or anything of that sort. And be careful over the skin—it must go to this gentleman who nearly lost his life through your carelessness."

"Well, there's one thing," remarked Branson presently. "We've lost a first-class lion, but we've found a good name for the car."

"What is it?" I asked.

"The Unicorn," he replied, with a smile. "The famous fight between the lion and the unicorn for the crown was, I believe, won by the lion. But on this occasion the other animal has come out on top. Yes, the name of the car is the Unicorn."

And a little later, when Branson opened a bottle of rare old wine in celebration of my escape, we formally toasted it under that name.

Mrs. Reid's Garden. Up at Ophir farm the gardeners are busy fashioning an old-fashioned English plot, designed after one of the queen's private grounds at Windsor. Mrs. William Reid has been in ecstasies over the English garden, and she has dispatched many flowers, shrubs and trees to her home on the Hudson, and she hopes that they will be in full beauty when she returns from her foreign sojourn. Trailing arbutus is to form the drapery for a summer house, and the English favorites, foxgloves, coral honeysuckle and hawthorn, are to make the hedges radiant, and some 18 or 20 varieties of old-fashioned flowers which Queen Alexandra especially affects. Most of these blossoms are ignored in American gardens, but they are pretty, nevertheless, and Mrs. Reid hopes to make her new Windsor garden one of the loveliest spots in her beautiful home.

"According to the statistical figures on insanity," says the doctor, "it can be shown that before long there will be actually more lunatics in the world than sane people. The burning problem of the day is how to prevent this increase of insanity."

"What is the use of wasting time and energy on an education bill when we have before us this absorbing problem, the contemplation of an insane world, to deal with?"

No Need to Worry. Ethel.—Why don't you marry him?

Ethel.—We could never get along together.

Ethel.—Well, you wouldn't have to. He is rich enough to live at his club.

PRETTY COTILLON FAVORS.

There are more novelties in the line of cotillon favors than ever before, and any hostess who may be planning for a dance of this kind will find that it will not be difficult this year to secure enough novel little devices for her guests to "favor" each other for two or three cotillions if they should want to.

Flowers or flower suggestions prevail, for these naturally add to the picturesque effect of the dance as nothing else can. In the favors they are of all sorts of bright colors, powdered artistically with gilt, so that they glitter in a fascinating way during the varied figures at the dance.

There are wands of all kinds topped with large flowers or butterflies. Large crumpled paper roses in pink or red, fleur-de-lis, pansies, chrysanthemums are all seen, the wands covered with paper in the same or some harmonious shade. On the end of one wand, which would be appropriate for an "announcement" party, is a large heart with a dozen or so of small red paper hearts hanging from this larger one. There is also a carnation wand with five very realistic flowers of this kind, the wand decorated with white paper and large bow of green ribbon.

Other crumpled paper novelties such as large picture hats, muffs, loaves, are anything but unbecoming to the dance belle. Parasols are made also in paper, for all the world likes their fluffy counterparts in lace and chiffon. This is but a sample of the lists which make the outlook for the cotillon season a favorable one.

Would You Like a Winter Window Box?

Such an Ornament Is Constant Source of Delight During the Cold Months Coming.

A wooden box fitted to the window with hooks and staples for fastening, and painted a dull, inconspicuous green, may be had for a small sum. Against this set the boxes in silver or silver-gilt metal, or boxes with stained glass panels outside, both of which cost many a pretty penny. Less expensive than these there are boxes and boxes.

The one thing needed in the window box is that it shall be stanch, and so set that it does not threaten the heads or the lives of unwary passers-by.

Before filling it with earth an authority in gardening warns amateurs to see that there are holes in the bottom sufficient to insure drainage, and over the whole bottom spread a layer of broken bricks or pebbles fully an inch deep. But the earth on this to within an inch of the box top. Even a small box should not be less than ten inches high. A foot is better; thus the plants have sufficient soil.

Plant the edgings first. Set whatever is chosen so the stems shall stand over the box edge slightly slanted outward. Pack the earth well about the edge plants, and see that their roots are spread, not crowded in a lump.

Make holes close along the inner edge for the row of flowering plants. In growth they will reach for air and light, both roots and branches, so the inset will help them to room. If vines are wanted for trailing over the inner edge bring back long well-grown sprays from the outside in preference to setting creeping things inside as well as out.

Art Reclaims Dark Room.

What an artistic touch can do with commonplace things is portrayed forcibly in the old-fashioned home of young Mrs. Calot Lodge in Washington. One of the drawing rooms is a dark, dreary apartment, which at first glance seemed hopeless. But a big fire place was lined with deep red tiles, and big gas logs were piled on bright, massive brass logs. A mirror was placed opposite the fire place, and another where it reflected the reflection, and then a series of mirrors going into the hall and the whole suite on what the French would call the entresol. The effect is brilliant and enlivening, and with the aid of rich hangings and a few rugs the entire house is transformed. Mrs. Lodge has been kept busy by her friends, who have similar dark places, suggesting and arranging, and the pretty fashion bids fair to be the vogue.—Harcourt.

Timely Entertainment Is Snow Luncheon.

Trouble and Expense Called For, But Results Will Delight Hostess and Guests.

The centerpiece may be a snowbank of white sweet peas, interspersed with some soft feathery bloom like sprays to impart a suggestion of windblown snow. A set of eggshell china, without any colored decorations, and knives and forks with white porcelain handles should be secured. The candlesticks should be of glass, with white candles, shaded with white silk, decorated with crystal beads. The hors d'oeuvre dishes may include frosted almonds, poached radishes, pickled onions and cakes with white icing. The place cards may have little frosted snow scenes, and a bunch of sweet peas, tied with white ribbon, may be laid at each cover. A menu made up almost entirely of white or nearly white edibles can be easily arranged.

The first course or appetizer might consist of fried peaches, the fruit being sliced, sprinkled with sugar, chilled and served in glasses or ice shells, with a cornet of whipped cream. The eater can mold snowballs of white cream, and snowball cakes can be made by dipping round cakes in soft boiled icing and then rolling them in shredded coconut. At one such luncheon the eager hosts were blocked by ice with flowers frozen in them, and a little hollow filled with water at the top.

For the Small Girl.

This is a quickly made little dress; it is in pale blue velvet. The square yoke is lined with satin, also the short sleeves. The skirt part is closely pleated, the pleats turning from the center front; it is joined to the yoke under a strap of muslin embroidery, which is carried over the shoulders. The collar and bands to the sleeves are of embroidery edged with a fringe of Valenciennes lace.

Materials required: 3 yards velvet 40 inches wide, and 2 yards muslin embroidery.

Black Silk Jumpers. Black taffeta jumper waists are one of the popular newcomers of shirtwaist departments. For the benefit of the woman just home from her summer's outing and not yet familiar with the much-used term "jumper," the word applies to guimpe waists and guimpe frocks which are as popular with grownups and young fry as the suspender waists were a few seasons ago. A black silk waist of this order, that is marked $2.95, is cut low at the front and has flowing sleeves that are only of sleeve cap depth. The front of the waist and the top of the sleeves are slashed and the sides of the openings thus made are joined by short, stitched straps caught with little buttons. Similar waists in black taffeta of varying designs come at prices up to $5 or $10. Lace or Hagarie guimpes are worn under them.

For Midday's Comfort. Theater ornaments for the hair are some of the prettiest things the stores have to offer. They are mostly small wreaths of flowers or of leaves, freely and gently set with brilliant, giving a coronet effect and lending an effective touch to an evening costume.

MINERS IN THE KLONDIKE.

Quiet, Provident and Anxious to Get Away as Soon as Possible.

Lack of water is the great drawback to mining in the Yukon, says Leslie's Weekly. There is little rain during the summer and the miner must depend upon the melting snows to swell the streams for his summer sluicing.

Villages have sprung up near the creeks and living is a shade higher than in Dawson owing to the extra freight. Sending sovereign post cards from these points becomes an expensive remembrance, as the plain uncolored ones sell for $1.50 a dozen. The picturesque swagmen of Cripple Creek, Creeds and Tonopah is not found here. The cost of getting "in" is heavy, money is not always easily made, and the winters are bitter cold and depressing on account of the long darkness. So the miner saves his earnings until he reaches a more congenial climate. To be sure, there are men on the creeks who drink whiskey—and the hardest kind of whiskey—and gambling goes on; yet, on the whole, the Klondike miner is a quiet, provident individual, who devoutly hopes that the gold fields are not to be his permanent home.

A man who works for a company or individual mine owner receives from four dollars to six dollars a day and his board. Many of them do their own cooking and live in cabins near the creeks. Flapjacks (pan cakes), bacon and coffee are their chief diet during the winter, and in midsummer it requires a dexterous hand to turn the flapjacks before the mosquitoes can settle on the uncooked side. The old-timer who has seen the ice come and go is known as a "sour dough," and these men are the aristocrats of the camp. The newcomer, or the man who spends his winters outside, is always known as a "cheechako."

If people in the states knew how letters from home are appreciated by the cabin dwellers of the Yukon they would send some message every day. I have seen miners sit in front of their cabins and read and reread old lettered letters. At some particular passage their faces would light up with a smile and the entire letter would be gone over again.

Talk It Over with Your Wife.

There are thousands of families homeless or living in poverty and wretchedness today, who could have been living in comfort, in good homes, if the husbands had confided their business affairs to their wives, says Success.

Women are very much better judges of human nature than men. They can detect raciness, deception and insincerity more quickly.

I know business men who would never think of employing a manager or superintendent, or a man for any other important position, or if choosing a partner, without managing in some way to have their wives meet the man and get a chance to estimate him, to read him. They invite the man whom they are considering for an important position to their home for dinner, or to spend a Sunday, before deciding. They want the advantage of that marvelous feminine instinct which goes so directly and unerringly to its mark.

I have known of several instances where a wife had cautioned her husband against having anything to do with a man with whom he was thinking of going into business, but the husband ignored the wife's opinion as silly and disregarded her advice to his great sorrow later, as the man turned out exactly as the wife had predicted.

Doctor Struck It Rich.

A wealthy New York banker, while visiting his parents in a small town, was stricken with fever. For three months he was confined in the old homestead, dutifully attended by a fond mother and a very zealous doctor.

The banker recovered slowly. One morning he decided that fresh air would do more for him than medical environment, and in a short time he was enabled to dismiss his physician.

When the doctor's bill arrived the banker studied it very closely. A few moments later the mother saw her son go to the woodshed, procure an ax and begin hewing, at the hitching post, which had stood in front of the house for 50 years.

"Frank!" she shouted hysterically, believing her son in another delirium, "what are you doing?"

"You'll have no further use for it," chuckled the perspiring banker, "hereafter the doctor will come in an automobile."

No More Country Doctors.

The country doctor is rapidly becoming extinct as a species, says the New York Herald. The men one meets at their societies look dress, talk and act as the men do at any meeting of city physicians. The papers presented are quite up to the city standard, the discussions mark the surgeon's experiences related would astonish some men who think the city clinics and clinicians do all of the work, or at least all that is well done.

Stuck Up for Her Sex. A schoolgirl in a Massachusetts town had often been made to acknowledge the superiority of her brother. One day her mother remarked upon the apparent utter lack of intelligence in a hen. "You can't teach a hen anything," she said. "They have retained more of the garden than a cat, a dog or pig something, but a hen—never!" "Hail!" exclaimed the child indignantly. "I think they know just as much as roosters!"

Struck Trouble at Once.

Scarcely had the Russian immigrant set his foot on the soil of the New World when sounds of a dire conflict assailed his ears.

"What is it?" he asked. "Has a revolution broken loose here, too?"

"Worse," answered his former neighbor and compatriot, who had met him at the steamer dock, as with blanched lips he hurried him to a place of safety. "It's a gang of roosters for the Giants mobbing an umpire!"—Chicago Tribune.

HE TRIES BIT OF STRATEGY.

When Policeman Barney Flynn approached the door of the modest little house he knew that he had one of the hardest jobs of his life before him. The captain wished to see Mrs. Miller. His reasons for this desire were not known to Policeman Flynn, and equally unknown were his reasons for not going in person to her house instead of sending for her. Many are the strange things that happen in a police station, and many are the strange motives that lie behind the strange actions. It might be a matter of pride in this instance or it might be a matter of judgment. There is sometimes an advantage not to be despised in being able to select the place for an interview; the surroundings count for much, and the one unfamiliar with them is handicapped. So the captain, presumably desiring to get certain information supposed to be in the possession of this woman, had sent for her, and she had refused to come. This in itself was surprising, for it is not customary to send regrets under such circumstances.

The captain seemed on the point of going to the house himself, but he thought better of it, and sent a more imperative message. The reply was the same as before: She had done nothing that put her at the back and call of the police, she didn't care to see the captain, and she would not come. Then he had sent for Flynn.

"I want to see that woman, and I want to see her here," he said. "Never mind why. I have a few things here that I think will make the interview more effective here than it would be there. If she knows what I think she knows I intend to get it out of her, but—well, all you've got to do is to get her to come with you."

"M-m-m, now, is that all?" asked Policeman Flynn, who had heard of the fruitless efforts of two others in that direction.

"That's all," said the captain. "She refuses to come, an' all I have to do is to make her change her mind."

"That's it exactly."

"Are ye a married man, captain?"

"Of course I am."

"I never w'd have thought it," commented Policeman Flynn, whereupon the captain laughed.

"You're such an ingenious and resourceful fellow, Flynn," he said, "that I believe you can do it. The very fact that she refuses to come makes me more confident that she can pat me on the track of certain people I am after, but it's a mighty ticklish affair as matters stand now. I have met her many times, but I never get her."

"If you can," returned Policeman Flynn, as he retired, scratching his head thoughtfully. "This easy said."

This is all that Flynn knew when he rang the door bell, but he had been doing a lot of thinking on his way from the station. He had prepared a nice little speech, which he had no chance to deliver.

"So you've come to get me, have you?" he exclaimed the moment she saw his uniform.

"I have," he replied, making an elaborate bow.

"Well, I'll not go with you," she asserted.

"I know ye w'dn't," returned Policeman Flynn, promptly.

"Oh, you did!" retorted the woman, sarcastically. "You knew it! Then why did you come?"

"This a bet," said Policeman Flynn, with unobtrusive efficiency. "I've met in an 'I'll tell ye about it. Oh! it's a strange thing—ye'll shpilt yer sides laughing, ye will so. Don't ye be afraid if ye do. Ye went on, as he gently forced his way into the house, the woman being too astonished to interpose any objection. "I don't want ye; I w'dn't take ye anyhow, fr I w'd make me lose me bet."

The woman made a stand in the hall, and Policeman Flynn naturally had to stop there also, but he was satisfied. He merely desired to get far enough in, so that she could not shut the door in his face.

"Well, you're the most extraordinary policeman that I ever saw!" she exclaimed. "The idea of coming here to settle a bet! I don't believe a word of it. You've come to get me."

"I've come to see ye," admitted Policeman Flynn.

"I've come fr ye, but not fr ye, fr ye see the phat? 'She'll not come,' say I whin th' cap'n tells me fr to drop up here an' tell ye he wants to see ye. 'Ye coorse he won't,' says the cap'n, 'but 'tis only fair to thry want more.' Ye see, th' cap'n an' me knows women."

"Oh, you do, do you?" was the sarcastic comment of the woman.

"Ye coorse we do, none better," answered Policeman Flynn. "I've met an' knows women; 'tis only women that doesn't. So we got to talkin' fr it in th' station, an' I've met an' knows there says ye won't come. 'Tis foolish,' they says, 'fr to stand after her ag'in whin there's 15 or 20 fr us here that knows women like a book, all sayin' that she won't come!'"

"Well, of all the conceits!" broke in the woman, hotly. "Know women like a book, do you? Why, you don't know anything at all about her."

"Sure we do," said Policeman Flynn, confidently.

"The absurdity of it!" exclaimed the woman.

"No, I'm not."

"There, ye have th' proof fr it," asserted Policeman Flynn, triumphantly. "Tis what we said. Oh! we're a bit hot fr it."

"I'm not afraid to come," insisted the woman, "I know what your captain wants, and it doesn't bother me a bit, only I don't want to come."

"Ye coorse not," acquiesced Policeman Flynn, "but ye're not comin'. I know ye w'dn't."

"Then why did you come for me?" asked the woman.

"Oh! I didn't tell ye fr it, did I?" returned Policeman Flynn, leaning comfortably against the post at the foot of the stairs. "Tis all along fr me wife. At th' station we'd give up sludin' fr ye ag'in, an' I was laughin' at th' idee fr annywan thinkin' ye'd come whin she up an' says: 'Barney, she says, 'how d' ye know she'll not come?' 'I know women,' says I. 'Ye're a fool,' says she—"

"She's right," interrupted the woman.

"What else did she say?" asked the woman.

"'Tisn't that th' proof fr it?" asserted Policeman Flynn. "She's like all th' rest fr th' women—she thinks she knows an' she roasts me fr thinkin' I know. 'Tis like a man-an' she says, 'fr to think he knows what a woman will do an' to be braggin' fr it. 'But I'm right,' I says, 'Ye're not,' says she; 'if ye're polite to her an' act th' gentleman,' she says, 'she'll come.' With that we have some words, th' foolish woman thinkin' she knows th' sex better than me that's married to a fine sample fr it, an' in th' end she lays a bet fr a new shawl an' a pair fr winter gloves that ye'll come fr I talk polite to ye an' don't thry fr to bluff ye. So here I am, an' I win."

"Oh, you do, do you?" retorted the woman.

"I coorse I do," said Policeman Flynn. "I have th' gloves all picked out. Oh! 'tis a great joke I have on her, she thinkin' I didn't know anything fr women. 'Tisn't a lesson fr her."

"I don't believe you," she said at last.

"Tis all th' same to me," returned Policeman Flynn, "so long as ye don't come with me."

"I believe you think I'm afraid to face the captain and answer his questions."

"Niver," insisted Policeman Flynn. "Tis only th' woman nist door thinks that. Ye see, I want there be mistaken," he went on, as he saw her laugh angrily, "an' who told her what I was after the dirts me, an' says: 'But she won't go with ye, though, fr she's afraid fr the police.' 'Did she say that?' demanded the woman."

"She seemed to know ye," said Policeman Flynn, blandly. "Tis a strange thing, too, whin ye think fr woman knows another. If a wife had as much sense she'd have a new shawl knittin' fr buyin' me a pair fr gloves with fur on thim. That woman nist door do be havin' th' sense of a man-an'."

"Just about as much," returned the woman. "I'm afraid, an' I'm read like a book fr a lot of lary men loafing about a police station, an' I Well, you just wait here a minute."

"Where ye goin'?" asked Policeman Flynn.

"I'm going to get my hat," was the answer. "I always did despise that woman next door anyway."

"Tis what I thought," chuckled Policeman Flynn to himself. "Ye're always safe in flurin' on that with th' woman nist door."

"How did you do it, Barney?" asked one of them.

Thereupon Policeman Flynn looked owlishly wise for a minute, and then contributed this bit of philosophy to the store of human wisdom:

"Tis easy to make a woman, do what ye want fr ye can keep her from knowin' what it is."

Nevertheless, to ease his conscience, he bought his wife a shawl, much to her surprise.

BREAKING IT GENTLY.

It was Willie's tenth birthday, and to celebrate the occasion his father had given him a watch.

"Now, Willie," he said to his delighted offspring, "I am going to have my bath. Don't you break your ticker while I'm gone, will you?"

About ten minutes later there came a gentle tap at the bathroom door.

"Well, who's there?" growled Willie.

"Go away, you careless scamp! Don't worry me!" cried his father.

When he came out of the bathroom it

PEARY IS AT SYDNEY

EXPLORER REACHES PORT AND MEETS HIS WIFE.

PRaises His Steamer

Gives Vessel Credit for Expedition's "Farthest North" Record—Talk with Capt. Bartlett About the Trip.

Sydney, U. R.—Flying the flag of the United States, which had been placed nearer the north pole than any other national standard, and weather-beaten and disabled, the Peary Arctic steamer Roosevelt arrived here Friday under sail and steam after 16 months' vain effort to reach the pole. Though not entirely successful, the expedition nevertheless got to 87 degrees 6 minutes north latitude.

Commander Peary came ashore almost immediately after the steamer anchored and joined Mrs. Peary, who has been here for two weeks waiting for her husband's return. Saturday they leave for New York by train.

Commander Peary is enthusiastic about the performance of the steamer Roosevelt. Asked of the very adequate point to which he had been able to place the Roosevelt in winter quarters was due to careful and increased knowledge of the movements of the ice he said it was due to the Roosevelt itself. He did not believe there was ever another ship afloat that could have stood the battle with the ice the Roosevelt had successfully fought. The boilers were the one defective feature of the ship.

Capt. John Bartlett, master of the Roosevelt, said the steamer was a good sea boat and that he will sail her to New York. He is ready to go again to the Arctic.

Capt. Bartlett is in charge of one of the parties supporting Commander Peary's advance. He said the storm which did the mischief was tremendous in violence and accompanied by blinding squalls of fine Arctic snow. He is satisfied the pole can be reached without great difficulty, weather permitting, and believes it would have been accomplished this trip except for the ice in question.

First Mate Bartlett, a cousin of the captain, said the crew of the ship were well paid and well fed and the Roosevelt was a staunch ship, but he did not think any of the New Foundland members of the present crew would be found willing to join another expedition. It was a hard experience, which few men cared to repeat.

RIOT AT HAMILTON, ONT.

Hamilton, Ont.—An attempt by the Hamilton street railway to start its cars Friday night led to riotous scenes which the police were powerless to quell. The mayor appealed for troops and at midnight was received from Toronto that 100 regulars were on the way to this city.

The strikers and their sympathizers smashed the cars and the windows of the radial station and chased the strike breakers. The soldiers from Toronto arrived about one o'clock. They were infantry and cavalry, armed with short range ammunition and swords.

State Capital Notes

Madison.—The state treasury is $29,758.25 to the good as a result of increasing peddlers of the state according to the annual report of the treasury agent made to the governor. Edward Pollock gives the following table of money received:

From licensees.....$1,000.00
Receipts from railroad agents..... 15.00
Receipts from license agents..... 15.00
Total.....$1,030.00

DISBURSEMENTS.
Commission to special agents.....$1,200.00
Assistant in office..... 100.00
Agent's expenses and extra services..... 60.00
Expenses and railroad agents..... 15.00
Salary of treasury agent..... 2,000.00
Total disbursements.....$3,375.00

This would leave the state $27,574.25 but to this is added the additional sum of $2,211 which was collected but did not pass through the agent's hands. These moneys are collected altogether from licensing peddlers in the state. Cities have the right to impose an additional fee.

Failure of Cooperative Stores.

In a report issued by Labor Commissioner J. D. Beck, cooperative stores in the United States are pronounced almost a total failure. The report says: "There are at present 212 cooperative stores in the United States. California having the largest number, 61; Wisconsin comes third place with 20 stores. These 212 stores have a membership of 76,146 persons. In this country cooperative distribution has been created by almost total failure. The greatest cause for the failure was collapse of the labor and farm movements which gave the system birth and the lack of business knowledge. The stores never were thoroughly organized and nearly always lacked the support of the wholesale house from which they could obtain their supplies. Department stores, trading stamp schemes, and the low prices of mail order houses all aided in the downfall of cooperative stores. Furthermore, conditions in this country, the individuality of our people, their changing employment and impetuous nature which looks to speculation rather than to conservative investment are opposed to the spirit of cooperation. Free libraries, public lectures, university extension courses, savings banks, building and loan associations and insurance policies take the place in this country which the cooperative store occupies in Europe. Many of the above causes are being removed today by the evolution in the industrial world. Recent organizations are upon a much firmer basis. Cooperative wholesale houses are being established in the Mississippi valley and on the Pacific coast. But, above all, the growth of social fellowship and unionism upon a solid foundation, only possible in recent years, together with a thorough business knowledge, will serve to give greater stability in the future. If such stores enjoy permanent success it will be solely as a business proposition; for it is now apparent that no lasting, effective reform of the industrial situation in this country can ever be accomplished by the application of cooperative doctrines."

Governor to Sift Stock Issue.

Gov. Davidson wants to know for what purposes the Chicago & North-western Railroad company is going to spend the money it raises on the $100,000,000 of new stock it recently decided to issue and what rate is going to be charged. He desires to use this information in connection with a recommendation to the coming legislature for the enactment of a law prohibiting the overcapitalization of public service corporations. He has sent a letter to the Wisconsin railroad commission asking it to investigate the stock issue of the Northwestern and advise him of the result as early as convenient. The governor said: "The inference is that the company permits existing stockholders to exercise a preferential right to subscribe for new stock at par, though it is worth a much larger sum in the market. The law of the state clearly contemplates that all stock should be issued for legitimate purposes."

State Law Department.

Following the 1st of January Attorney General L. M. Sturdevant will return to Neillsville to resume his law practice. It is believed he will later be appointed as special counsel for the state in the railroad cases to assist Frank L. Gilbert, the newly elected attorney general. Sturdevant is familiar with the railroad cases, having spent over two years in the trials of the lower courts and will doubtless be retained in the supreme court battle. A. C. Tilles, of Superior, the present assistant attorney general, will doubtless be retained.

New in State Offices.

The termination of election brings a new troop of office seekers to the capitol. Every state officer, except the chief executive, will be a new-comer. Gov. Davidson will make no changes in the executive force. It is understood that Private Secretary O. G. Munson will be temporarily displaced during the session of the legislature, but will resume the duties immediately following the session. William D. Connor, the lieutenant governor, is the wealthiest of the newly elected officers.

Great Experiment in Corn.

Farmers of Wisconsin should be interested in a variety of corn that is a heavy yielder and at the same time comes early to maturity. Such a corn is known as the Silver King, or Wisconsin No. 7, which after four years of careful selection and effort on the part of Prof. R. A. Moore, agronomist at the Wisconsin experiment station, has been made to produce upon a 20-acre field at the Hill farm an average of 75 bushels of shelled corn per acre. This is a remarkable yield of corn.

Requestion Refused.

Gov. Davidson has refused to honor a requisition from the governor of Michigan for John Balthor of Milwaukee, who is wanted in Detroit to answer to the charge of having sold household furniture that he had not fully paid for. It was found that the requisition papers were defective. Adolph Kanneberg of Milwaukee appeared before the governor in behalf of Balthor. Detective Baker of Detroit presented the requisition to Gov. Davidson.

OPPOSE NEW PRIMARY LAW.

Racine Supervisors Think Measure Should Be Repealed.

Racine.—Members of the Racine county board of supervisors do not like the new primary election law. Many of them expressed themselves in warm terms and openly gave as their opinion that it should be repealed, but whether they will take action for legislation in that direction is not definite. The adverse criticism came up when the printing bill was presented. It amounted to about $1,500, more than twice as much as in recent years, owing to the necessity of publishing so many election notices, on account of the primary election law. It was shown that under the law it was absolutely unavoidable and that the rates were fixed by the statutes.

SUES FOR VETERAN'S ESTATE.

Milwaukee Administrator Brings Action Against Federal Government.

Milwaukee.—R. B. Mallory, acting as public administrator, filed suit against the United States government in the county court.

The plaintiff in each case is the county of Milwaukee. The issue at law is the question of jurisdiction in determining who shall administer the estates of old soldiers who die intestate. Over half a million dollars is involved in the litigation. Mr. Mallory says he will file 1,500 additional cases soon, and eventually the number will reach 4,000. It is contended that Milwaukee county is entitled to the money and property left by old soldiers who die intestate, such money and property to go to the orphans of Milwaukee county.

Thus it would appear that there will be no further trouble with Dietz as far as holding logs is concerned if the criminal warrant of the state can be disposed of without trying to bring Dietz to justice.

Badger Soldiers Lead Army.

La Crosse.—With a figure of merit of 102.45 the Third regiment, Wisconsin national guard, leads the entire United States army in shooting. Col. Orlando Hefner, of La Crosse, commanding officer of the regiment, is in receipt of official results of the year's shooting from Herman G. Helstrom, sergeant major of the Second battalion, Third regiment, to that effect. With 102.45 to its credit the Third is nearly a point and a half above the Thirteenth infantry, the best shooting regiment in the regular army, which had a mark of 101.7 in the last annual competition.

Say Infected Meat Is Sold.

La Crosse.—The alleged sale of hogs from flocks which were found to be infected with hog cholera has caused a commotion in this city. It is alleged that farmers residing in the district affected by hog cholera, fearing the state veterinarian would order their flocks killed, hastened to butcher large numbers of the animals and bring them to the city. Dr. Clark, assistant state veterinarian, and Dr. Patterson visited several farms in the district and found many hogs suffering with the disease. A strict quarantine has been placed.

Senator Randolph Injured.

Manitowoc.—While superintending the unloading of the stramer Wilkesbarre at the central slip here Senator Randolph, recently reelected to the state senate, met with an accident in which his foot was partially crushed. The senator was standing on the dock when the gangplank slipped from the grasp of the men who were to unload the vessel as the plank was being put in place and caught the foot of the superintendent under it as it fell to the dock.

No Solution at Inquest.

Manitowoc.—All that a coroner's jury could determine upon investigating the recent death of Vern Hungerford on the right of way of the Milwaukee road, was that he met his death as the result of a blow on the head from some blunt instrument. A strong effort was made to clear up the mystery but no evidence was given which would warrant a charge of murder. The two companions are held on a charge of stealing a handcar.

Hunter's Wounds Are Serious.

Dakota.—Frank Currier, son of Sidney Currier, was brought home from Curry, Wis., with severe gunshot wounds in his left hand and the side of his face. He was standing on a log with the gun resting by his side when the gun slipped, struck on the hammer and was discharged.

Pleads Guilty to Graft.

Milwaukee.—Jacob Schutz, the former South Milwaukee supervisor, pleaded guilty to grafting and was fined $200 and costs. He was once convicted on the same charge, served three months and then got a new trial. He gave evidence on which scores were indicted.

Quarantine Lumber Camps.

Ashland.—Camps Nos. 4 and 10 of the Foster-Lathier Lumber company, near Mellen, have been placed under strict quarantine and nine cases of smallpox which have developed have been placed in the pest house. The disease has been prevalent for months.

Starts Fire with Oil; Dies.

Mauston.—Mrs. Rownd, aged 89 years, was burned to death while trying to light a fire with kerosene. She ran to the door to call for help, but died in the doorway before anyone reached her.

Burglars Shoot Watchman.

Fairchild.—Ben Christopherson, a watchman, discovered two burglars in a saloon. One shot the watchman in the arm and both fled.

Brown County Insane Asylum.

Green Bay.—The annual report of County Physician Buchanan shows the Brown county insane asylum, located just out of Green Bay, to be in as good condition as any of a similar class in the state of Wisconsin and in most instances to rank a little higher.

Wolves Close Schools.

Sturgeon Bay.—Paul Strain had a narrow escape from wolves in the thick woods. Children are being kept home from schools on account of the animals.

Killed Under Freight Train.

Green Bay.—John R. Wallen, foreman of a Northwestern switch engine crew, was killed by slipping and falling under the wheels of an incoming freight train. His body was cut in two at the waist line and his features mangled beyond recognition.

Get "Jack the Hogger."

Oshkosh.—In Albert Neubauer the police believe they have captured the "Jack the Hogger," who has been terrorizing little girls here for several days.

BEGINNING TODAY

We will inaugurate a Clothing Sale without a Parallel in the history of Rhinelander. $20,000 worth of Modern High-Class Clothing, Furnishings, Hats, Caps and Shoes, for men, women and children, will be sold without reserve and regardless of cost.

The Cause of this Mighty Slaughter of Modern Merchandise. WE ARE GOING OUT OF BUSINESS. The building we have owned and occupied for the past eight years has been sold to Mr. J. J. Reardon, of this city, and rather than sacrifice our stock to some outside concern, we have concluded to place the entire $20,000 stock on sale, to be sold at retail for less than the actual cost of the raw material. It will be a great undertaking to close out this entire stock at retail in a short space of time, but the prices we will put on the goods will undoubtedly move them out rapidly. The sale will be held in our store on Brown Street, and Rhinelander's greatest sale of Modern Merchandise for Men, Boys and Children will begin at our store on Brown street, Rhinelander, Wis. It will be the greatest Clothing sensation of the year. Famous makes like Hart, Schaffner & Marx, High-class clothing that will be actually sold for less than the actual cost of raw material and never again will you have such an opportunity to dress in such rich raiment at so trifling a cost. Everything will be sold just as we advertise. We have been in business for the past 7 or 8 years and during that time we have never misrepresented. We have the confidence of this entire community and we intend making this the greatest sale ever known in the history of Rhinelander. We quote you a few prices in order to show you what actual bargains there will be placed on sale. We would advise you to come as early as possible while the pick of this magnificent stock is to be had. Every statement and every price that we have advertised in newspapers and circulars is a conservative statement of the actual facts, and all we ask is for you to come test our statements and convince yourselves that all we have advertised is the truth.

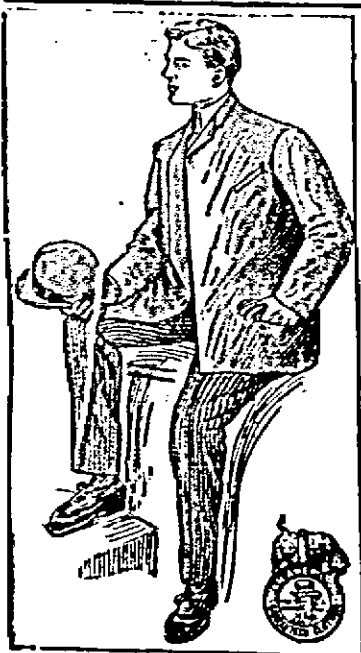

This will be the greatest opportunity of a lifetime for the people of Rhinelander and may never again present itself to you where a Reputable Concern who value their good name more than money, will offer their entire stock of high-class Clothing, Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps for all Mankind at less than cost to land the goods in Rhinelander.

It will pay you to come to this great sale; no matter whether in need of merchandise or not it will pay you to purchase for future use. Do not overlook this golden chance to dress yourself in high-class merchandise at less than inferior goods cost you elsewhere.
